

The article contains the results of an analytical study of PC methods and software used for NPP probabilistic safety analysis, describes the basic mathematical concepts used in the software system BARS and provides data on the results of solving test problems by the use of various software systems. The work has been accomplished under the auspices of the Russian Fundamental Research Fund.